Some Things Political and Some Things Social.

TO-DAY'S FRENCH POLITICS.

The Government Sure of a Good Majority in Carrying Out Its Plans—Only the Socialists Disapprove—Other Foreign News.

(Copyright 1893 by the United Press.)

PARIS, Nov. 22.—So many members of the Chamber of Deputies have inscribed their names as speakers to morrow that it is not probable that a division will be taken on the government's demand for a vote of confidence. Everything indicates, however, that when the vote is taken the government will obtain a substantial majority. The securing of this majority will not be alone due to the fact that the moderate Republicans, already a compact group, heartily endorse the programme enunciated yesterday by Prime Minister Dupuy. The Conservatives also approve of it. The other opposition groups are still in an embryonic stage, one day agreeing upon their platforms and the next revising them, and otherwise wanting in that definite party cohesion that is absolutely necessary to make their antagonism formidable. The Moderate Republicans held a meeting to-night at which M. David Raynal presided. The government's declaration was unanimously approved.

The party of the Radical Left, now calling itself the "Gauche Progressiste" party, also held a meeting to decide what the attitude of the party would be. It was decided that the members should be left free to attack the government on the questions of the separation of Church and State, to which the government is opposed, closing all State offices to the clergy, and the revision of the Constitution as regards the suppression of the Senate. A majority of the party desires a moderate platform, but as a matter of policy will leave their programme open, so as to keep it in touch with the extreme Left which in turn approximates the moderate Socialists. The latter on Monday obtained a noteworthy success in the election of M. Calvinhac, one of their number, as secretary to one of the bureaus.

The position is not one of first rate importance, but the selection of M. Calvinhac is significant as being the first time a Socialist was ever chosen to hold the post.

The affiliation of a section of the Socialists is evidenced in an interview with M. Guesde, whose election as representative for Roubaix has not modified his frankness. M. Guesde refused to attach any blame to dynamiters. He said: "We have no intention to limit our action to legal means. For us action has two categories—those leading to our own aims, and those swerving therefrom. It is not from legal scruples that we repudiate dynamite attacks upon the police. We reject violence simply because it is contrary to our present interests."

The government newspaper organs have taken advantage of these utterances to declare war upon the Guesdists. The police are still hot upon the trails of the anarchists. They have traced many anarchists to Lyons, Bordeaux, St. Etienne, Lille and even Algeria, and have seized any number of documents, although they have made few arrests. The authorities in Lille were well frightened this week by a printed leaflet, dated from London. The author of the leaflet declared that he would blow up the town hall and prefecture of police and Palace of Fine Arts. A rigorous watch has been kept over all these buildings, but no signs of dynamiting have been discovered.

The Debats prints an interview with General Martinez de Campos, commander of the troops in Barcelona, Spain. Campos thinks that there are barely 200 anarchists in the city of Barcelona, and that but fifteen or twenty of this number are dynamiters. The turbulence of these few, Campos said, had given rise to the idea that the Barcelona anarchists were numerous and without exception desperate. It was still necessary to exercise energetic surveillance and to introduce special repressive measures, as existing laws did not suffice to control even the few dynamiters in the city. Campos was able to give the assurance that at the opening of the Cortes, the government would introduce a proposal to have all anarchist offenders tried by military or special tribunals. Probably the Cortes would also assent, he said, to measures interdicting all anarchist publications, forbidding anarchist meetings, making provision for the rigorous treatment of persons of anarchist antecedents, and specifying exceptionally severe punishment for all persons found in the possession of explosives. The rigor of these precautions could be abated in less troubled times.

Khaned, the grandson of Abd el Kader, the Arab prince who was deposed by the French in Algeria almost fifty years ago, is now at the St. Cyr military school. His father, Emif Hashem, the present chief of the dynasty, was unable to support his harem with the 40,000 francs allowed him annually by the government, and so he came to Paris last year to mortgage his income. He used the lump sum thus obtained enough to pay his debts. Later he sold his palace at Damascus and he now lives in an humble retreat in Algeria, where his expenses are paid with a pension of 3,000 francs a year. Khaned will be educated at the expense of the State.

The trial of Baron Rhaden for the murder of Lieutenant Kastenkiold, has been fixed for Dec. 4, at the Puy de Dome assizes.

Mr. Levi P. Morton's gout became so troublesome recently that an operation was necessary and he will be obliged to keep his bed at the Hotel Londres. His condition, although serious, is not dangerous.

Mrs. Eustis, wife of the United States Ambassador, will be at home to Americans on Monday afternoons during the months of December and January.

Mr. Morse, wife of the Consul General, yesterday began her weekly receptions.

Among the Americans who have come to Paris in the last week are Mrs. Clemens (wife of "Mark Twain"), the Misses Clemens, Colonel J. R. Barnes and Mrs. Barnes, Miss Cheatham of Baltimore, F. T. Ogden and Mrs. Ogden of New York, S. C. Gill and family of Ohio, R. H. Hazard of Rhode Island, C. P. Pressly of Georgia, and Edgar McClellan of Seattle.

Anarchists Arrested.

BARCELONA, Nov. 22.—The police of this city have unearthed a club of anarchists, whose meeting place was in a house on the Rondo San Pablo. They found chemicals, formulas for making bombs, percussion caps, pistols and documents showing that the club was the headquarters of an extensive organization with branches in many places in Spain and abroad. Miguel Nacher, president of the club, and two women who were with him at the house, were arrested. If there were other anarchists in the building at the time the police made their raid they managed to effect their escape.

Later in the day the police searched the house of an anarchist named Pablo Bernat, in the vicinity of Mont Juich. This, it will be recalled is the place where Pallas, the anarchist who attempted to assassinate General Campos, expiated his crime.

CRIPPLE CREEK'S RAILROADS.

The Terminal to be Ready by Dec. 5—Regarding the Other Line.

The Denver Republican yesterday morning contained the statement that the first train over the Midland Terminal road would be run on Dec. 5. In an interview with Mr. Colbran it was further stated that the company has funds on hand to build the road through to the Arkansas river, and that a tariff will be put into effect that will be based on a fair percentage of the capital invested. The Denver Times last evening had the following which will be of interest to those who have prophesied continually that the Florence and Cripple Creek road would be the first to build.

D. H. Moffat, president of the First National bank, who went to New York several weeks ago with President Johnson of the Florence and Cripple Creek railway, returned home yesterday. He announces that he is not prepared to make any statement whatever in relation to the result of his visit to New York. The trip was without doubt for the purpose of negotiating a loan for the construction of the new line. Incidentally, during a conversation that Mr. Moffat was having with President Jeffery of the Rio Grande, when a reporter for The Times entered the office, the banker said that Colorado was looked upon by eastern people as a rotten borough" but he found a few friends in financial circles—which may be taken as significant that the Cripple Creek railroad scheme is not a failure. According to Mr. Moffat's impression, New Yorkers think the people of the entire State hold views similar to those of Governor Waite. Mr. Moffat, however, told them that such was not the case and that Colorado would recover from the panic before New York would.

"One thing that is favorable to the West," said Mr. Moffat, "is the fact that it is paying its eastern debts."

In connection with the railway matter it is stated that the contract has been let to J. B. Orman of Pueblo, or at least there is an understanding between him and President Johnson, who is still in the East, that gives the work to Orman.

There seems to be a sharp contest between the Midland Terminal company and the company that Mr. Moffat represents, as both parties are dependent on Eastern money to construct the lines. It is claimed that while Mr. Moffat was in New York press reports were sent from the West booming the Midland project and that these acted adversely to the efforts being made by Messrs. Moffat and Johnson, as inquiry followed questioning the advisability of building two lines to the camp. All this required considerable explaining.

It looks as if the Florence project will survive.

MINES AND STOCKS.

The Jeff Davis is said to be hoisting some quartz from the new shaft on their No. 2 claim on Gold hill.

Mr. H. D. Gortner, owner of the Mollie Kathleen lode in Poverty gulch, is said to have been offered $60,000 for the property.

The Rattler, north of the Eclipse, owned by Spinney & Smith, is in good stuff. They have a four foot vein at the bottom of a forty-five foot shaft.

The Cripple Creek Syndicate Mining and Milling company vs. A. Knecht, et al., is the title for an adverse suit filed yesterday. It is the Summit lode adversing the Oro.

Calumet was active yesterday and strong at 4½c to 4¾c and in good demand. Work is quoted at 4½c; Mollie Gibson $1.07½; Gold King, 9½c; Alamo 1½c; Lottie Gibson 2c.

Secretary Hall, of the Calumet company, yesterday moved his office to No. 25½ Tejon street, in the same rooms occupied by Slaughter Bassett. Mr. Hall goes to camp to-day on business connected with the company, but will leave an assistant in charge of the books, that transfers of stock may be made.

Judge Campbell yesterday afternoon heard argument in an injunction suit entitled McKay vs. Casey. In this suit the owners of the Eagle claims asked that the owners of the O. K. be restrained from working certain territory lying between the two properties. After hearing the evidence the court entered an order restraining both sides from working the territory.

The outlying districts are looking up well. From Grouse mountain, Barnard creek, Beaver and Rhyolite good reports come in. On the Uncle Sam at Barnard creek, in a 50 foot shaft and 70 foot drift, a good streak of blue quartz has been opened up. This vein was shown to exist from the surface, and looks richer at this depth, but the rock hasn't yet been tried. Messrs. George Estell, William Crandall and others are the owners.—[Morning Journal.

Isabella stock was still staggering under the blow yesterday that it received on Tuesday when a large quantity of the stock was suddenly thrown on the market. In the morning it went down to about 15c, but by late in the afternoon it rallied to 16½ or 17c, where it remained pretty firm. A representative of THE GAZETTE interviewed Mr. Hagerman on the subject last evening. When asked whether he knew any reason for the sudden drop in the stock, Mr. Hagerman pleasantly replied that he guessed it was because there was more stock for sale than there were buyers. He went on to say that the price of the stock had been run up to 25 cents by the brokers with statements that the company has opened up the Victor vein, and too many people were trying to realize at that price. "It is not true," said Mr. Hagerman, "that the Victor vein has been cut, but I fully believe that we will strike it." As to the stock, Mr. Hagerman said that he had a telegram from a man in the East who wanted to know the reason for the drop in the price of Isabella, and he had replied to the sender, "It is because you have put 20,000 shares of the stock on a market which could not stand it."

The Journal Suspends.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Nov. 22.—The Morning Journal, the new daily paper which started in last week with such a flourish, suspended publication this morning. The cause of the suspension was a lack of funds.

Killed at the Crossing.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 22.—The afternoon express on the Little Miami railway, leaving here at 3:15, struck a carriage in the suburbs of Neals, in which were three young ladies. Miss Anna Kelso and Mi Mary McDill were instantly killed and Miss Miss Eva Kelso so badly injured that she will die.

ALL ABOUT HAWAII.

The Pacific Isles Still a Leading Theme of Interest.

MINISTER STEVENS EXPLAINS.

His Course a Non Partisan One—Three Reasons Why Annexation Should Take Place—Congress will Act, Says Senator Davis.

BOSTON, Nov. 22.—Ex-United States Minister John L. Stevens gave a lecture this evening in a Lyceum course at Somerville to a crowded audience, on Hawaiian affairs. Before beginning his address he remarked that during his thirteen years service as United States Minister under five Presidents, he had invariably refused to recognize political parties in his own country believing that in our foreign relations our policy should be national and continuous, always with a united front to our foreign rivals. He firmly refused to consider the Hawaiian a party question in any sense. Mr. Stevens then said:

"Our interest in Hawaii appertains to at least three questions, more or less distinct from the other, though they cannot be considered entirely separate. There is the question of Christian civilization; there is the question of American future commercial power in the Pacific, and the third involves the issue of responsible government under the American flag, in harmony with pledged American faith, the best American antecedents and the plain logic of American history and American opportunities.

"At the date of her downfall Liliuokalani was without sympathy and aid of the best of the native Hawaiians and of all the respectable and responsible white residents of islands. Not a hand was lifted in defence of the semi-barbarian throne when it fell, conclusively disproving the assertion of the unscrupulous agent of the fallen queen, sent to Washington to secure as large a sum of money as possible for conveying to our government all her right and title to the Hawaiian throne, and to the crown lands to which she had never had any other claim than to the income so long as she reigned. This agent before embarking for Washington made sure of a large advance fee of thousands of dollars, which the fallen Queen paid out of her own purse, and he thought he might help his case by the use of utterly baseless statement that the United States Minister and naval commander had deprived Liliuokalani of her throne. In presenting the motives for admission into the American Union the islands come under more American aspects than any of our previously annexed States or Territories, as the facts I have just stated abundantly [illegible] Why should they not be permitted to come under the flag so deeply loved by the islands? It is literally correct to say that according to the Hawaiian census of 1892 there were then about two thousand persons residing in Hawaii who were born in the United States. But in addition, to these a large part of the 7,000 born on the islands of foreign parents and put down as Hawaiian, are of American parentage, and they make an important portion of the American colony. They were educated in American ideas and sentiments, their leading men being graduates of American schools and colleges. Some of these served in the army of the United States during the war of the rebellion, suffered in rebel prisons, bear on their persons honorable scars, or sleep in graves redolent of American patriotism.

"But I hear a whisper in the air: Let the islands vote on the question. The demand comes from three distinct sources. It was first made by the British minister at Honolulu, a Tory in his political views, a persistent antagonist of American interests and by personal and family relations strongly attached to the fallen Hawaiian monarchy. Immediately after its organization in January last he urged this plan on the Provisional government. This scheme was subsequently brought forward by the queen's attorney and the lottery or opium rings of which the fallen Queen's lawyer is believed to be the agent, favor the plan. While the ultra-Tory English and the Canadian Pacific railroad have purposes in view other than those of the fallen queen and the lottery and the opium rings, they are agreed as to the method of defeating annexation.

"The ex-Queen's attorney has often been the paid agent of Claus Spreckels and the latter makes part of the alliance to kill annexation by the plebiscitum. This is an alliance powerful as it is disreputable, and is not admissible by honest Americans.

"America cannot get rid of her future responsibilities if she would, and all her attempts to do so will be at the cost of future generations. Inspired by these great truths, in the name of what is most sacred in Christian civilization, in behalf of a noble American colony bravely holding the advanced post of America's progress, in behalf of the remnant of the native Hawaiian race now living on those sunny islands, in behalf of every and all men who have chosen their homes in that threatened land, whose chief men and devoted women are struggling for a better future, I cherish the faith that the American people, the American statesman and the American government, thoughtful of America's future and great responsibilities, will settle the Hawaiian question quickly and will take care that the flag of the United States floats unmolested over the Hawaiian Islands, and that henceforth it shall be moral and political treason to remove it or strike it down."

CLEVELAND CRITICIZED.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 22.—Senator Davis spoke on President Cleveland's position in the Hawaiian incident this afternoon with a good deal of bitterness, intimating that Congress might look upon the matter much more seriously than the public expected. He said: "If Mr. Willis has been commissioned to interfere with the concerns of Hawaii, to such an extent as to change the form of government and reinstate the Queen, it is an interference with the affairs of an independent nation without the least shadow of warrant on any principle of international law. The new government was distinctly recognized by President Cleveland, when he accredited Mr. Willis as minister. Any act by this country to reinstate the Queen in case President Dole refuses to depose himself and his government in her favor, would constitute an act of war, and under our Constitution Congress alone has the power to declare war."

A Great Billiard Game.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—The second night's play in the 14 inch balk line billiard match for 4,000 points, 800 points a night, between Jake Schaefer and Frank C. Ives, drew a large crowd to Central Music Hall. The match is for a purse of $5,000 and the net receipts. The play on both sides to-night was fast and brilliant. Schaefer beat his world's high run of 230 by making a run of 243, and Ives also beat Schaefer's previous record with a run of 203 points. The score at the end of to-night's play stood: Schaefer 800, highest run 243, average 40, grand total 1600. Ives 850, highest run 203, average 14 11-19, grand total 1513.

DIPLOMATIC OPINION.

Critics Still Discussing the Recent Hawaiian Affair.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—[Special.]—One feature of the president's Hawaiian policy with which people in Washington find fault is that it reverses a well established tradition in international affairs and fouls our own nest. Though parties may dicker over domestic affairs, and one administration may seek to gain advantage over another concerning matters of internal policy, it has always been our theory that in dealing with the outside world we know no party. What one administration does in foreign affairs is upheld by all subsequent administrations. If we make mistakes or commit wrongs, for governments are no more infallible than individuals, we leave the work of criticism and the burden of proof to others.

Advertising Our Errors.

We are all Americans, whether Democrats or Republicans, and it is not American to wash our dirty linen before the gaze of the world. This administration may or may not have been actuated by a desire to reflect upon a former administration by its decision in this Hawaiian case. Whether it was or not, it adopted a policy which advertised our own error, if error it was, which magnified the offense alleged to have been committed by our agents instead of minimizing it. We became our own prosecutor while no one else was even saying a word against us or demanding that we be held to trial. Leaving out of the question all other considerations, this is the view which experienced diplomats in Washington take of the Hawaiian policy of our government. They claim the mere incident of a change in the presidential office since last January should not lead us into the error of going back on ourselves. And they add that whenever a government adopts a policy of refusal to uphold and defend its own acts, except when forced by outside pressure and the flagrant nature of the case to do otherwise, it is sure to lead itself into difficulties.

International Relationship.

Another strong diplomatic tradition, which one hears men talking much about in Washington these days, is respect for the existing order of things. The theory of international relationship is that the representatives of a government accept things as they find them in foreign lands. Our minister to one of the South American countries, for instance, might find it necessary to deal with a new government once a week throughout the revolution season. It is none of his affair who or what is in control. He is accredited to the government of that country, not to any particular government of it. In the higher walks of diplomacy, as in the foreign offices and state departments, the tradition is that the whole tendency of operations must be in the direction of respect for what is, for preservation of stability. If one government has any excuse for interfering directly or indirectly with the affairs of another, it is found in a desire to encourage that which is in existence and promote the law of stability, by giving assistance within certain bounds. If, despite the international tradition that change is to be frowned upon, a change of dynasty comes, then the new government is entitled to the same regard that its predecessor had been entitled to and was paid. Once more the encouragement of stability operates, and that, without any sort of question as to the honesty, legality or honor with which the existing order of things was brought about. It is enough to know that it exists.

Advantages of Stability.

Through the operation of this well established and wholesome international tradition governments are always slow to recognize rebellions. As long as the old authority has any chance to retain power or defeat its rival, so long are the sympathies of other nations with it. Before the new government can obtain recognition it must obtain power, possession. Just as soon as it is once established it benefits by the international encouragement of stability, even as against the very government which it has just displaced.

Washington is full of men who have had experience in diplomacy and who are familiar with international law and usages. These men deplore that the administration should have thought it necessary to violate all of these diplomatic traditions in Hawaii. In the first place, we foul our own nest by magnifying an error said to have been committed by our agents. We follow this by reversing the rule of stability, striking down the existing order of things and promoting change. While many of these diplomats say the president and Secretary Gresham were actuated by a high purpose and a sincere desire to do the right, they maintain that the ethical question involved was not strong or clear enough to warrant a violation of these other tenets of international intercourse.

Doing Wrong Penance.

They maintain that even if it be true, as has been claimed, that our minister and naval officers in Hawaii connived at the deposition of the queen, this would not be sufficient ground for any interference and disturbance of the existing order of things. We might confess our fault if pressed to it, deplore our mistake, pay damages to the aggrieved parties or make some other reparation. But to throw down a government that is well established and friendly for the purpose of affording reparation these diplomats characterize as doing penance by perpetration of an international crime.

This is the diplomatic view of the case. The ethical view, the view which the administration has hoped the country would take, is that having wrongfully taken a man's property from him the only way to make reparation is by restoring the goods.

COLORADO COLLEGE.

The repairs on the boiler house are completed.

Mr. J. C. Devin expects to leave for his home in Ottumwa, Ia., shortly.

Mr. H. S. Murdock spent Sunday in Boulder in the interests of the State Executive committee of the Y. M. C. A.

President Slocum has given two of his Tuesday morning ethical talks, one on "Truthfulness," and the last on "Giving and Taking."

The college entertainment on Tuesday evening was a great success financially, and from the comments of the audience as they filed out it was evident that they had passed a most enjoyable evening.

A fine specimen of petrified wood was found in the ditch which is being dug for the steam pipes between the boiler house and the new library. The specimen has been added to the College collection.

Mrs. McClurg is now delivering a series of very interesting lectures on "Colorado's Pre-Columbian Cliff Dwellers" under the auspices of the Woman's Educational Society of Colorado College. The second lecture will occur this evening at 8 p. m.

President and Mrs. Slocum, accompanied by Mrs. Bacon, have gone on the annual tour of inspection of the State Board of Charities and Corrections. The Board will visit Buena Vista, Canon City and Pueblo, and finish with an inspection of the Institute for the Blind on Friday.

PRESIDENT SLOCUM STAYS WITH COLORADO COLLEGE.

Rumors were abroad through the summer that President Slocum of Colorado College had received a call to the presidency of some large institution in the East, but nothing was definitely known about the matter, although the friends of the College were considerably disturbed. It now transpires that the institution so anxious to secure Mr. Slocum is Illinois University, and that the trustees have again and again pressed its claims upon him, offering as an inducement a salary much larger than that which he is now receiving. But he has finally and absolutely refused the offer and, without any reserve, gives himself to the work of developing our own institution.

It is with great satisfaction that we chronicle this fact. Mr. Slocum has been so completely identified with the larger development of the College during the last few years that its friends have felt that he could not be spared without stunting the growth of the institution for very many years to come. The struggle through which the College passed before President Slocum came was so bitter, and the relief brought by his coming so great, that everyone acquainted with the history of the College felt a sinking of heart at the thought of his going. Moreover, he has become so closely identified with all good movements in the city and the State, that his loss would be keenly felt far outside the immediate College circle. We have nothing but sincere congratulations for the college that has succeeded in retaining him.

That Mr. Slocum is sacrificing much in remaining here is evident. He gives up the large increase of salary and the opportunity further to develop a large institution that has strong financial backing. The offer had many tempting features, but he rejected it because he so sincerely and implicitly believes in Colorado College. He has the prophet's vision that can see, not merely what is, but what is to be.

END OF A GREAT STRIKE.

England has suffered as much from the great coal strike as from a war. Not to speak of the $150,000,000 or more which is estimated to have been lost, there has been terrible suffering all over Great Britain. Coal has trebled and quadrupled in price, and poor people found it impossible to keep warm.

The greatest credit for the cessation of hostilities is due to Lord Rosebery, under whose chairmanship and management a committee of mine-owners and miners have agreed upon resumption. The old wages are to be paid until February, and then a committee of owners and miners is to meet and settle on a new schedule.

The result is a victory for the workers, for they were fighting against a reduction. They claimed, and apparently with reason, that the wages were already as low as they could take and live. The average seems to have been about $1.50 per day. They preferred to starve at once rather than starve gradually at less than living wages. On the other hand the colliery owners alleged, and showed by their books, that they had been operating at a loss. Unless the price of coal can be kept up above what it was before the strike began, it is hard to see how the mines can be kept open; and Lord Rosebery may have to be called in again in February, when the present schedule of wages comes to an end.

UNCLE JERRY RUSK.

Hon. Jeremiah Rusk, whose death was reported Tuesday from his Wisconsin home, was one who deserves more than a passing mention. For many years he was a prominent figure in political circles of the northwest and in the latter period of his life attained a high position in national affairs. He was not an educated man in the ordinary sense of the word, but his success implied an uncommon knowledge gained in the world's great school. He served with distinction throughout the late war, and came out of it a brigadier general. He was three times a Congressman, three times a Governor of Wisconsin, and the first Secretary of Agriculture with a place in the Cabinet. In the latter position his chief service was in securing the admission of American meats to European countries. His general popularity was unbounded, and the familiar title of "Uncle Jerry," was worn by a man who never grew beyond the common people, and who in his greatest elevation remained a simple, kind-hearted farmer.

STEINITZ AND TSCHIGORIN.

It is not often that one catches The New York Sun napping. But here is a chess item that will make every well-informed lover of the game open his eyes.

The Tarrasch-Tschigorin match, which was not quite up to expectations in the quality of its play, has ended in a draw, and hence in disappointment. Chess players, the kings of intellectual sportsmen, like to see a fight to a finish as well as people who fancy different sorts of contests. Nevertheless this match gives us means for an interesting comparison between these two players and the present champion, Steinitz. Steinitz has beaten Tschigorin in two regular battles. In the last one in 1891 in Havana he yielded the odds of permitting the Russian to choose his own openings, the Evans gambit and the two knights defence, and beat him then. In St. Petersburg, Tarrasch enjoyed the same advantage through Tschigorin's willingness to let him decide the openings in attack and defence, and, yet all that the former could do was to draw. This leaves Tarrasch one rank below Tschigorin as a master, and two below Steinitz. What is wanted now is a match between Steinitz and Lasker.

The most decisive battle ever fought by Steinitz and Tschigorin consisted of two simultaneous games by cable. In one, Tschigorin, having first move, used the Evans gambit; in the other, having second move, he used the Two Knights' defence. It was a fair match between the open game and the close; between what Steinitz calls the "modern school" and the old-fashioned school. Tschigorin won both games. Over the board Steinitz has beaten the Russian in two matches, as stated in The Sun, but in estimating their relative rank, the games by cable should certainly be taken into consideration.

The new Cripple Creek daily suspended publication yesterday. It struck too fast a gait to start with, and couldn't keep it up. What's the matter with The Crusher, anyhow?

The State Treasurer says he has $1,200 on hand. An extra session would cost anywhere from $10,000 to $50,000. The extra money will have to be found by extra taxation.

The Governor will be on exhibition here on Friday. We hope he will find out that Colorado Springs is unanimous against an extra session.

A METEOR'S FLASH.

Personality of a Musical Genius, the Late Peter Tchaikowski.

(Special Correspondence.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—In the spring of 1891 there appeared at the opening of the great Music hall in New York city, which Andrew Carnegie built and endowed, a composer of music who in his field bore the same rank as John Ruskin or Alexander Dumas or Ralph Waldo Emerson did in that of literature, and who, in fact, in his musical writings suggested some of the artistic traits which distinguished each of these great writers. His name was familiar to music lovers all over the world and he was an especial favorite in the United States, although but little was known of his personality.

He was Peter Tchaikowski, a Russian, with the blood of the Czechs coursing through his veins and making itself felt sometimes in his most vivid and impassioned music. An immense throng gathered in the Music hall, perhaps 5,000 persons in all. Secretary Blaine was there that he might witness the honors paid to his son-in-law, Walter Damrosch, who was to act as conductor of this musical ceremonial. In fact, it was while attending this distinguished celebration that Mr. Blaine was smitten with that attack which was even then portentous of mortality.

Young Damrosch had invited Tchaikowski to come to America and assist at this opening of a new home for music, and the Russian, being delighted and having opportunity promised to come to conduct some of his own orchestral compositions and to write one piece specially for the occasion. When it was announced that he was to come, American music lovers felt as though a lion had been captured by Mr. Damrosch, and many of them who live in remote cities decided to be present that they might see Tschaikowski and hear some of his compositions conducted by himself.

Tschaikowski was seen to be a man of medium height and not of great and imposing figure and of those peculiar proportions with which Americans are apt mentally to picture the greatest of the czar's subjects. His cheeks were of as delicate a pink as those of a maiden. The yellow beard and hair slightly touched with gray and worn with careless care were all that suggested his nativity. He bowed modestly, and it was then seen that he was without a trace of those manners of affectation, self consciousness or vanity which have characterized some great musicians, nor did he have any of that nervous fussiness, impressive enough in its way, which characterized the great German musician Von Bulow, who had been in America a few months before.

He took up his conductor's baton as quietly as though at a rehearsal, held it suspended in the air for a moment, gave one little twirl, and a second later he and that splendid orchestra were sailing away upon a glorious sea of harmony and melody. Before five minutes had passed it was made plain to the audience that there was one soul in that orchestra, and that was Tschaikowski's. Although his face was turned away from the audience, yet there was revealed that subtle, undefinable magnetism which makes a great artist the master of his instruments and his audience.

He carried the orchestra through a glorious tempest of music, sometimes rivaling the thunders of the heavens in its power, and then sinking so that it seemed to be the lullaby of a summer zephyr. And when it was through he at first, not heeding the majestic applause of the audience, bowed, and with spoken word acknowledged to his orchestra their perfect service. Then he turned with a half surprised, half timid look to that great congregation which was sending to him a tribute of magnificent acclaim. They called him back and back again, so that he seemed overwhelmed, wondering why so much of honor should have been given to him then.

He had scored what the authors call a hit. His personal success had been even greater than that which the playing of any of his music before that day had caused, and in the week that he was in America he was over and over again amazed by the evidences of personal popularity which came to him. One of the music publishers said that within a month hundreds of thousands of copies of Tschaikowski's works were sold, and the composer had received several most flattering and pecuniarily valuable propositions. Had he been at liberty he could have accepted engagements which would have netted him $100,000.

The writer met him in his rooms one morning shortly before he returned to Europe. He found the composer at his piano. Musical manuscript lay scattered all about. A Russian samovar sent forth the fragrance of newly brewed tea, and a tray containing the remnants of many cigarettes revealed the Russian custom which he had brought with him. He was as modest a man as had ever achieved fame, and he spoke with both the delight and the diffidence of a child of the joys of his experience in America. Then pointing to his manuscript he said, "I am just making notes of something which I hope to write purposely for America, and which will be first produced when I come here again; for I am coming in two or three years to stay a long time."

But he is not coming. On Nov. 5, meeting a party of friends at dinner, he drank some polluted water in St. Petersburg and died six hours later of cholera, and the death of no other European composer, excepting Gounod, could have occasioned such widespread grief in America as did that of Tschaikowski. A Pertinent Question.

Pat had had his photograph taken. It was a head and shoulder photograph, the genial Celt preferring that to a full length pose, owing to a patch in his best trousers. When the proofs came, he showed them with a little pride to his wife.

"That's thim!" asked the good woman.

"Phottygraphs," answered Pat.

"Of what?" queried Mrs. Pat.

"Me, sure," Pat rejoined. "Phat else?"

"Hivin knows," the wife replied. "That's happened yure legs."—Harper's Magazine.

READING THE HANDS.

INDICATIONS OF CHARACTER IN THEIR SHAPE AND FORMATION.

What the Palm Reveals—The Shape of the Fingers, Their Joints and Tips—The Large Handed and the Small Handed Man—The Liar Keeps His Hand Closed.

For centuries fortune tellers have based their predictions of future happenings and accounts of past events upon the lines of the hands of those who asked counsel from them. But their predictions have usually been met with scorn from the more enlightened classes, and the hand has only within the past few years been recognized by scientific men as an accurate index of character. Science has reduced the old and inaccurate methods of reading the hands to something nearly akin to an exact system, and while few pretend to say that the creases and lines within the palm afford a means of foretelling the future, there is little doubt that the shape and formation of the hand as a whole indexes the character of its owner with a considerable degree of truth. The uses of all members of the body are indicated by their aspects, and it is not at all unreasonable to assume that it is possible to deduce the mental characteristics which have prompted these uses.

In reading character from the shape of the hands there are certain general rules to be observed. Much character is outlined by the palm. If it be unusually heavy and thick, the possessor may safely be considered a person of a low grade of intelligence, there being even a tendency to brutality at times. The opposite sort of palm—narrow, thin, skinny, and flabby, denotes a feeble mind, lacking intellectual and moral force, and inclined to timidity and lack of self reliance. It may also be noted that a deep, hollow palm is invariably found in persons who are ever complaining of their "bad luck," and who make a failure of life.

There are two broad subdivisions of hands with respect to fingers those with smooth, regular fingers, and those with knotty, gnarled ones, the latter being again divided into those with one joint prominent and those with both.

Knotty, irregular fingers are to be preferred to the smooth variety. He who has them is a man of good taste, able to give his reasons for his beliefs and ideas. He is perhaps not so endowed with tact as the smooth fingered man, but he is more evenly balanced. If the upper joint—that nearest the nail—be alone fully developed, the mind is well ordered and the owner is possessed of executive capacity and given to philosophy and science rather than to theology and ready acceptance of the views of others. If the lower joint is the more prominent, the owner applies himself and his faculties rather to things temporal than things mental, and he is far the more worldly minded. But if the fingers be smooth, with no joint prominent above another, the owner has a tendency to act upon impulse and intuition, not stopping to inquire the reasons of every action, and he has far more natural grace and tact than the other.

The hand with both joints developed is indicative of the most thorough thinkers of philosophy and order. Such is the hand of the scientist, the analytic person, the lover of truth for its own sake. The smooth hand is that of the artist, the man of finer feelings and subtler instincts. Often it becomes knotty in after life, but the change takes place at the same time that the mind of the owner changes and becomes more skeptical—when life becomes more real and less romantic and when the owner learns that reason is a better guide than intuition.

The length of the fingers is an important element of the hand. The short, fingered hand indicates that the owner is naturally quick, even to the verge of impulsiveness, and is prone to act upon the spur of the moment. He scorns details, preferring generalities, and grasps a subject at once, the mind acting rapidly and the action being prompt. Such a person does not require a full explanation of a scheme or subject, but is able to decide upon its merits at once. Shorten the fingers to an excessive degree and you have a person who is crude and lacking in tact. On the other hand, the long fingered man is a lover of detail, a person of microscopic mind, scrupulous that he may even descend to fussiness. He is neat about his person, dignified, easily worried by trifles and likely to be distrustful. He is the exact opposite of the quick, impulsive man of the shorter digits, and fears hidden motives in the conduct of even those whom he should not distrust.

The longest fingers almost always indicate affectation and even cowardice and deceit unless these evil tendencies be overbalanced by other talent. The gambler, staking nothing who puts into his bet, as a rule has long fingers, and the avaricious man, full of schemes, ever planning the ruin of others for his personal gain, is similarly marked.

It is a curious paradox that the large handed man notes small things, details, exquisitely refined objects, and is microscopic in his tendencies, while he whose hands are full of delicate hues of every sort, lovers of ostentation and display, immense buildings, majestic estates and all else that is on a great scale. His handwriting is large and perhaps full of flourishes, while that of the large handed man is small and precise. Only the medium hand, neither large nor small, with fingers neither short nor long, can grasp at the same time the mass and the details of a subject.

Fingers which are broad and thick at the tips are badges of a luxurious temperament, and when the thickness is carried to an extreme the luxuriousness becomes sensuality. Twisted and crooked fingers are to be dreaded, as they denote a perverted disposition, prone to tyranny, teasing, and worrying. The stiff, harsh hand, opening with difficulty, is an invariable index of stubbornness and avarice, while the supple, free opening hand, tending to bend backward, indicates generosity, frankness, susceptibility to conviction, and sometimes inquisitiveness and extravagance. Be on your guard against the person who habitually keeps his hand closed wholly or in part. Such a person will deceive you if he believes he will gain by it. In this connection it may be said that many authorities claim that no man can tell a falsehood with his hand held fully open, unless by a strong effort of his will he controls the telltale member. The tendency of the hand is to close when its owner lies. You may put this to proof by observing the next "suspect" who crosses your path. If you believe that he is passing the bounds of verity, notice his hands. If they are closed, you may assume safely that the story requires corroboration.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Secret of Garfield's Tomb.

Lieutenant Clarence R. Edwards had charge of the battalion which for many months was placed as a guard around the temporary tomb of Garfield, and it was at the lieutenant's suggestion and under his supervision that a weird and extraordinary thing was done at that tomb. Plenty of evidence was furnished of intentions to get the remains of Garfield and hold them for a ransom, and some of the plots as they were discovered revealed extraordinary skill. The Lieutenant at last suggested that Garfield's remains be removed secretly from the tomb, so that even if would be thieves got access to the tomb they would be foiled.

His father and two or three other citizens of Cleveland, who were friends of Garfield, approved the plan, and one night they took the casket from the temporary sarcophagus and placed it in a vault in the cemetery. Then another casket was filled with a sufficient amount of earth to give it weight, and that one was placed in the temporary Garfield tomb. Thousands of persons for more than a year visited that tomb and gazed sorrowfully upon the sarcophagus which contained nothing but an earth filled casket. Garfield's remains were removed to their permanent abiding place, as everybody supposed, from the temporary tomb, whereas they were, in fact, taken from another vault, and the secret was only revealed to a few intimate friends.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Famous "Nilometer."

During the time of the periodical inundation of the valley of the Nile a queer recording instrument, known as the "nilometer," is hourly and daily consulted by a sluggish Egyptian officer, who to judge from his motions and actions cares but very little if the river keeps its bed or overflows the whole northern half of the African continent. But as it is the only labor he is forced to perform, and his bread and cheese really depend upon proper execution of the duties assigned, the record is taken with scrupulous accuracy.

This queer and ancient "thermometer of the Nile" (it dates back to 815 A. D.), is situated at the end of the island of Rhoda. It is simply an immense upright octagonal pillar standing in a well like chamber, surrounded on four sides with strong walls provided with arched openings which allow the rising waters free access to the nilometer. The recording pillar is covered throughout its length and on all of its eight sides with cubits and digits nicely divided, painted with great precision, much resembling sections of a gigantic checkerboard. There is a huge staircase leading from above down to the bottom of a cistern, in which the nilometer stands, the well-worn steps attesting to the imaging number of times the instrument has been consulted.—St. Louis Republic.

wayside. To produce a meritorious comic opera requires indefatigable industry, tireless patience and a temper perfectly under control, for even after an opera is "staged" the composer sees parts of his cherished work literally torn to pieces by the critics. The man who can keep his temper under such trying conditions, and at the same time adapt himself to the changing whims of the people, becomes the hero of the hour.

MARIE TEMPEST.

A Curious Creature.

The creature most tenacious of life is the common sea polyp. One may be cut in two, and two creatures are the result. One may be slit lengthwise into half a dozen sections, making as many animals. They may be turned inside out and enjoy themselves just as well as before. If two be divided and placed end to end, the result will be a monster having a head at each end of its body.—Exchange.

Bridling Geese.

In the west of France a cord is put round the neck of geese, and to this cord is suspended horizontally in front of the breast a long and heavy stick. Goats in the same region are bridled—if indeed we may call it bridling—exactly in the same fashion. The object in both cases is to keep the animals from passing through the hedges and eating the grass of neighbors.

CHANGE IN TIME OF THE
"MISSOURI PACIFIC FAST MAIL."

Commencing Nov. 12, 1893, the great Missouri Pacific Railway Company will shorten the time of its fast mail train, eastbound. Under the new schedule this justly popular train will leave Denver at 4 p. m., Colorado Springs at 6:23 p. m., arrive at Pueblo at 7:10 p. m., leave Pueblo at 8 p. m., arrive Kansas City 7:30 p. m., leave Kansas City at 8:25 p. m., and arrive at St. Louis at 6:55 a. m., where a direct connection is made in Union depot for all points north, east or south.

By this change in time a direct connection is made at Pueblo with D. & R. G. Train No. 8, from the west, and D. & R. G. Train No. 104, from Southwestern Colorado, enabling passengers to make a great saving in time over the present eastern connection.

By this change in time the great Missouri Pacific Railway Co. has demonstrated its warm friendship toward Colorado in again reducing the time between the West and East.

THE WABASH ROUTE

IF YOU ARE GOING EAST

It will be to your advantage to know:

The Wabash is the Short Line between Kansas City and St. Louis.

The Wabash is the shortest and most direct route between Kansas City and Detroit or Toledo, connecting at both those points with the Trunk Lines East.

The Wabash forms the most convenient route from western points to Chicago, and passengers in Chicago more conveniently to the World's Fair lines than any other road.

The Wabash runs finer equipment on both first and second class passengers than any other route.

Call or write C. M. Hampson, Commercial Agent, 1224 17th St., Denver.

MID-WINTER FAIR.

The Mid-winter Fair at San Francisco will open on January 1st, and continue throughout the winter, where all the principal exhibits from the Columbian Exposition, Chicago, will be displayed, will be an additional attraction this winter. The great improvement in passenger train service, higher degree of comfort in the cars, shorter time required on the trip, combined with the cheapness of the excursion tickets now being sold to California and back by the "Santa Fe Route" make the journey agreeable, and one can almost say, economical.

The many delightful resorts now established in California afford every comfort and luxury desired by the fastidious, and present unique attractions. The Hotel Del Coronado, San Diego; the Raymond, Pasadena; the Redondo beach and hotels at Santa Barbara, Monterey, Riverside, Los Angeles and many other points have grown famous as any on the Atlantic coast, and a fact that should not be forgotten is that they all are resorts all the year round, although the greatest number of tourists are in California between the months of November and May.

This line offers choice of routes going and returning.

Yesterday was the birthday anniversary of Mrs. E. T. Marsh of South Wahsatch avenue and her daughters, Mrs. F. L. Mr. Reuben Berrey, the chairman of the Populist committee, stated yesterday, however, that there would be no contest. He thought that grounds could be found for a contest but that it would not be made.

Either maliciously or otherwise a false rumor has been making the rounds of this city to the effect that the El Paso Electric Light company means to take out their line the first of the coming month. We wish to state that in a conversation to-day with Mr. E. E. Wade, manager, we were informed that this is false and that they do not intend giving up their hold on the city until it is necessary, when they will give due notice. [Colorado City Chieftain.

A very quiet but happy event was the marriage on Tuesday evening of Mr. Mort Parsons and Miss Elva Walker. The ceremony occurred at 1403 Lincoln avenue, West Colorado Springs, which they have fitted up for a home, and Rev. F. W. Hart of the First Baptist Church officiated. Mr. Parsons is the popular clerk of the Board of County Commissioners and a pioneer resident of El Paso county, while his bride is the daughter of a well known ranchman at Husted, Colo., and a young lady well and favorably known in this city. THE GAZETTE joins a host of other friends in extending congratulations.

It is announced that President Harper of Chicago University is to be the orator at the opening of the new library of Colorado College some time in January. It is now made public that this offer was the presidency of the State University of Illinois.

The committee of the Chamber of Commerce which has the matter of soliciting subscriptions to the Cripple Creek Bureau of Information in hands reports that it is succeeding admirably and hopes soon to raise all of the money. Tomb of the Three Wise Men.

There is in the cathedral church of Cologne in large purple shrine spotted with gold and set upon a pedestal of brass in the middle of a square mausoleum, faced within and without with jasper. The shrine is said to contain the remains of the three wise men who went to Bethlehem in order to worship the Messiah and whose bodies, according to tradition, were discovered somewhat in the east, brought to Constantinople and interred in the Cathedral of St. Sophia. When Eustorgius became bishop of Milan, the people of that city obtained the privilege of making Milan the resting place of the sacred relics.

When Milan fell into the hands of Frederick Barbarossa—A. D. 1162—the influence of the archbishop of Cologne prevailed upon the emperor to allow the remains to be transferred to the latter city. They are generally called the Three Kings of Cologne, and their names, which are Casper, Melchior, Balthasar, are written in purple characters upon a little grate that is adorned with a remarkably large oriental topaz and a profusion of pearls and precious stones. Over against the shrine are six large silver branches, perpetually illuminated with wax candles. This celebrated shrine is said to be opened every morning at 9 o'clock, when the wise men are seen at full length, each having on his head an elegant crown of gold, richly garnished with jewels.—Brooklyn Eagle.
